IMMIGRATION LAW UPDATE: Trump v. J.G.G.

- In a significant ruling (Trump v. J.G.G., April 7, 2025), the Supreme Court allowed the government to transfer Venezuelan nationals suspected of ties to foreign terrorist organizations to prisons in El Salvador under the Alien Enemies Act.
- The Court emphasized the importance of habeas corpus and the limitations on judicial review in removal cases, underscoring the complex balance between national security and individual rights.
- However, notable dissent from Justices Sotomayor and Jackson highlighted critical concerns:
 - Justice Sotomayor raised issues regarding potential due process violations and emphasized the importance of judicial oversight to prevent rushed deportations.
 - Justice Jackson criticized the Court's expedited decisions, calling for greater transparency and thoughtful judicial review to ensure procedural fairness.
